

Call for papers ICOM-CC's Triennial Conference!

Submitted by Marina Herriges on 22 Jan 2025

Preliminary abstracts for papers are now invited for the ICOM-CC 21st Triennial Conference in Oslo, Norway. All selected papers will be presented orally in parallel Working Group sessions and published as a full paper in our Triennial Preprints.

For more information: Call for papers/posters – ICOM CC 2026

ICOM-CC is starting to share information on the technical program before and after the conference: Post and Pre Tour – ICOM CC 2026

Cultural connections are at the heart of why we conserve heritage. These connections—whether societal, professional, or temporal—are vital for understanding and preserving the cultural identities embodied in material culture. As global changes and societal shifts accelerate, the need to respect and advocate for diverse voices and communities, including Indigenous cultures, has become ever more critical.

In light of new challenges and opportunities, the 2026 ICOM-CC Triennial Conference will explore how conservation can embrace inclusive collaborations, adapt to changing contexts, and ensure that conservation knowledge is accessible and impactful. By integrating ethical approaches, interdisciplinary methods, and innovative technologies, conservation can play a pivotal role in bridging divides and fostering connections.